National organizations watching local elections

by Lindy Magner

With an influx of school board candidates countywide with ties to religious right groups such as the Christian Coalition and Citizens for Excellence in Education, the upcoming election could be pivotal.

According to Mike Hudson, regional director of People For the American Way, a civil liberties group headquartered in Washington, D.C., this election could be "a major turning point."

"We've been monitoring the San Diego County situation for over a year; it this election proves successful for the religious right, it will encourage more such activity across the nation," he said.

Hudson's staff has been compiling information on the number of religious right candidates which won seats during the 1990 election.

"It's been a major, major undertaking (to compile information); what we're seeing most are boards which now have one or two (religious right) members.

The La Mesa-Spring Valley School District saw the election of two Christian fundamentalist board members in 1990, and with three of its remaining seats now up for grabs, it could be one of the first board in the nation to have a religious right majority.

Also the Lemon Grove School District is seeing a push from candidates thought by the Mainstream Voters Project to have ties to fundamentalist groups.

Christine Lenschow, People For the American Way researcher, reported that at least one school board in San Diego County as well as one in Florida have been effected by the religious right agenda which includes support of abstinence-only sex education curriculum, and the axing of bilingual and foreign language programs and breakfast programs.

However, clear religious right majorities do not yet exist on those boards, though that could easily change Nov. 3.

Within the last year, Florida's Clay County School Board discontinued two student self-esteem programs as a result of religious right efforts.

According to a parent with two children in that district who requested to remain anonymous, a "vocal minority" of parents objected to the self-esteem programs as well as to the inclusion of contraceptives in the sex education curriculum.

She stated that it was these parents which contacted groups including Citizens for Excellence in Education, enlisting aid in pressuring the school board to remove these programs.

She noted that there was also pressure on members not to approve a new foreign language program.

Also, the board voted out its superintendent of schools.

In San Diego County, the Escondido School District has also felt been effected by the religious right agenda.

According to board member Duana Nerhus, though she only considers two her fellow board members as Christian fundamentalists, 3-2 votes axed lessons on contraceptives from the sex education curriculum as well as removed the fictional book, "The Witches" from library shelves.

Nerhus noted that until recently the Escondido district a Christian fundamentalist superintendent who had purged school libraries of materials he felt were sensitive, including encyclopedia volumes which include sections on human sexuality.

"We're now doing a search for a new superintendent," she said.

That district's two Christian fundamentalist board members are currently up for re-election, according to Nerhus.

Don Smith, a fundamentalist on the La Mesa-Spring Valley School District board, is also co-chair of the San Diego Chapter of the Christian Coalition.

Founded by evangelist Pat Robertson, the coalition conducts workshops to train fundamentalist nationwide in how to run for school boards.

In past interviews, Smith has stated that his group is not "off in right field somewhere" and, rather, is in step with the majority of Americans.

He and board member Cheryl Jones have voted against the district's breakfast program on the basis that it takes away a parental responsibility and thus weakens the family unit. Also, Smith and Jones have expressed the view that bilingual programs are not a priority and curriculum should center on the basics.

Candidates identified by Smith as associated with the Christian Coalition include Sylvia Sera Sullivan, Jim Deyling and Tami Scott.

Scott recently requested that the board remove "The Witches" from school libraries - the same book removed from Escondido School District's library shelves.

Once again, the Lemon Grove Kiwanis Club has sold a truckload of delicious apples to benefit needy causes in the community. We caught John Pipes and Ray Mollenhauer hard at work last Saturday. The picture begs the question, "How many Kiwanians does it take to lift a box of apples?"

Haddock named district teacher of the year

Few in American Falls, Idaho were surprised when Nadine Wright Haddock announced that she would attend the University of Idaho to become a teacher.

Her career plans were well known to the 37 students in her high school's graduating class. She talked of being a teacher since childhood.

Haddock's early career plans may have contributed to her recognition as "Teacher of the Year" in the Lemon Grove School District.

"It's a pleasure to watch Mrs. Haddock work," District Superintendent Joe Farley said in explaining her selection as the District's top educator for 1992-1993. "She has a special ability to excite students about learning."

Haddock, who joined the District as a primary teacher in 1969, is presently a language arts resource teacher at San Miguel Elementary School.

In addition to daily work with students, she demonstrates teaching strategies for others, develops curriculum, and contributes her expertise to the District's language arts program.

Haddock attributes her "love for language" to a verbal and active family that valued education.

"I wanted to be a teacher since I was a child. When I was in high school, I babysat and the children had to pretend they were my students while I taught them," she said, confirming research findings that talented teachers frequently know early in life that they'll be educators.

"I truly like and respect children," Mrs. Haddock said when pressed to explain her acknowledged success in the classroom.

"I have a real ability to attract children to me. It seems to me that kids learn from me for some reason that I don't always see in their reactions with other adults. Students are 'with me' and I'm not always conscious of the reasons why."

She measures her teaching success in the achievement of specific children. As a resource teacher she frequently works one-on-one with children needing additional help in reading and language. She is also proud of her efforts to improve language arts instruction by demonstrating lessons for teachers.

"The other day a teacher told me that I really helped her learn how to teach an integrated language arts lesson. Her comment made me feel like I made a difference for the teacher, and her children," Haddock said.

As the Lemon Grove School District's "Teacher of the Year" honoree, Haddock will compete with nominees from other San Diego County school systems for regional and statewide recognition.

DUNCAN HUNTER'S BORDER FENCE IS CUTTING DRUG AND ALIEN SMUGGLING

"Although not yet complete, the steel border fence has aided Border Patrol tremendously," said Muriel Watson, founder of "Light Up the Border."

So far in fiscal 1992, the Border Patrol has seized 1,100 percent more cocaine than in all the previous year; 400 percent marijuana; and apprehended 130,000 more illegal this year than before the fence.

Congressman Duncan Hunter is author of the legislation that permits military personnel and equipment to help drug. Army Reservists and National Guard units have built more than 14 miles of solid fence between San Diego and Tijuana, using surplus steel landing mats. They have also built over 140 miles of roads along the border to aid Border Patrol mobility. Duncan Hunter will continue this project in other smuggling corridors along the California-Mexico border.

A new look

Familiarity, they say, breeds contempt.

In our particular situation in San Diego we certainly do not have contempt for our place on this planet. However, we do not really appreciate it, either. I became very aware of this last week when transportation people from all over the North American continent gathered in our city. The American Public Transit Association, (APTA) held its annual meeting in San Diego, and in being part of the host committee, we saw this place we call home through the eyes of strangers, and were amazed. The local agencies, the Trolley, the bus companies, and the para-transit groups did a fabulous job of planning and executing the convention and entertainment.

As a board member of MTDB, I was pressed into service, along with my wife, Jackie, and we took part in the functions. I was particularly impressed with "our city" and really enjoyed revisiting some of the things that we just take for granted. Enjoying the things again that our guests were seeing for the first time was a singular joy.

It has been some time since we have visited Sea World and Old Town. The Point Loma Lighthouse was a thrill with a view of the San Diego skyline that has changed dramatically.

Apparently Budweiser has worked some miracles at the Maritime Park, and the new exhibits are great. The view of our harbor from a seat on the bus as it crosses the bridge is much different from the bumper stickers and tailpipes that one usually is looking at from the front seat of the family car. The Wild Animal Park and our World Famous Zoo have improved and updated. The architecture in Balboa Park is worth another look even though we have seen it many times. I guess I should say, "looked at" but not really seen. Our wealth of museums, the Gaslamp District, and Horton Plaza, are all awesome to people from St. Louis and Detroit.

What is commonplace to us is very special to our out-of-town visitors. When we are griping about the traffic delays, we should just be looking around at the "wonders" that are so impressive to out-of-towners. We really do live in the "finest city" and instead of just smelling the coffee, we have much more to appreciate here in San Diego County.

The many new Gillig buses, and our bright red Trolley are showcase systems to the delegates from all over the country. Our numbers in the areas of ridership and fare box recovery rates are unmatched anywhere.

Safety, too, yes SAFETY is much more assured on our system than any other comparable jurisdiction, or higher. It is very progressive and highly successful and is an example that others want to emulate. Our Trolley cars were full of APTA badge wearers, and they are carrying our success story back home to integrate into their respective societies.

Mass transit is the one real, positive step that can be taken to clean up our air, reduce our dependency on oil, and to make our highways safer for us all. We should all be proud of San Diego's Transit organizations, and do all that we can to promote their use in the years to come.

Also, please look on the bright side. It is all around you in San Diego, and especially in Lemon Grove with our "Best Climate on Earth."

If you have any questions or suggestions for Dr. Burns, send them to P.O. Box BB, Lemon Grove, Ca. 91946

Adopt-A-Child program needs help

There is no question that this is going to be a difficult holiday season for many people.

Already the number of families calling for Adopt-A-Child help is overwhelming, reports Rev. Joan Pettis, who operates the Lemon Grove Food Bank.

This is a volunteer effort begun by Lemon Grove Food Bank, Lemon Grove United Church of Christ, and Soroptimist International of Lemon Grove, and now aided by the Firefighters, Lemon Grove Sheriff's Station, PTA Council and PTAs, several service clubs, churches, businesses and individuals.

Last year, the Adopt-A-Child program funded gifts to 549 children and food to their 213 families. Pettis noted that if what we and other social service agencies are seeing continues, as many as 250 to 300 families this year, with as many as 700 children, will need assistance from the program.

Adopt-A-Child serves Lemon Grove children and families with an outfit of clothing and a nice toy for each child, and food for Christmas dinner for each family. Only families that meet low-income standards qualify, and the food bank coordinates with all major East County agencies and Lemon Grove churches and schools so efforts and aid are not duplicated. This is the program designated responsible for Lemon Grove by the East County agencies

The help of local businesses is now being solicited.

You can help by buying for a family or a child, giving a monetary gift to enable our shoppers to buy for you, collecting new toys and/or canned goods, giving donations from your business, or any combination of these. There is no overhead cost.

Donations may be sent to Lemon Grove Food Bank, c/o Joan Pettis, Box 518, Lemon Grove, Ca. 91946.

Questions can be referred to Joan Pettis, 466-0503 or 589-0191. If you know of a family who meets the program's criteria and is not receiving help, contact Pettis.

From Where I Sit

A Mellowing of Halloween Tricks
by Frank Andrews

After marriage and with maturity setting in for me, my Halloween celebrating became less and less vigorous. From tipping over out houses and other wild trick-or-treat pranks, I had to settle for costume parties and old time dances. What a let down that was!

B.K. (before kids), my wife and I would join up with other young people of our age to attend one of the Halloween dances in the area. I remember having a "ball" dancing every single dance not missing a beat. I nearly danced my little fat legs off. I had to always remember to take at least one spare clean, dry shirt along. The climate was not always too hot but always very muggy.

Square dancing and the Circle 2 Steps were always quick-step which required steppers that were in Olympic physical condition. I don't believe I could go once around the dance hall nowadays.

One Halloween, to combine dancing and masquerading, we met at a friend's house before the dance started to promenade our crazy costumes and have a couple beverages to get into a party mood. All our make-up accessories were taken from our homes as there was little money for such foolishness as costumes. The last evenings of October up in Minnesota are pretty crisp so most everyone wore coats or jackets.

As usual, I had to do the ridiculous and nearly froze my "buns" off doing it. I dressed - or really, undressed - as a diapered baby; from the baby bonnet that exposed a cute spit curl on top, my front teeth blacked out with tar, red rouged cheeks, bare-chested, a crib sheet folded into a diaper with a big horse blanket safety pin, and wearing my old army boots painted white to cover my tiny toes. All this foolishness topped off with a baby bottle hanging around my neck, nipple included, filled with spirits of the evening.

After all the ladies had their turn at cuddling and kissing this big baby, we proceeded in going to the dance hall and lots more fun. I don't really know which law I would have broken, maybe indecent exposure, we were lucky to not have been stopped by the authorities.

To top off a fun evening, we stopped at another friends house who couldn't make the dance for a light lunch. Have you ever been awakened at 2a.m. from a nice peaceful, sound sleep to be greeted by a bunch of hungry, noisy partygoers? The bill-of-fare was egg salad sandwiches without any frills, as eggs made the cheapest sandwiches possible at 17 cents per dozen. The entire evening of fun and frolic cost less than a dollar a piece.

The youngsters out in the rural area where we lived got pretty tough if their demands for treats weren't met. You might find your outhouse tipped or some other destruction.

I had to relate to my party friends the old story about little George Washington and the cherry tree. I told my father that I was with the gang that dumped our toilet over on Halloween. He gave me a good whipping. I sobbed, "George Washington's father didn't lick him for telling the truth about cutting down his cherry tree."

"No, but I'll bet little George's father wasn't sitting up in the cherry tree when he cut it down?"

"How do you go about dumping a toilet nowadays?"

Commentary

by Paul Treske

Thank heavens, in a few days it will be all over. The airwaves, as if by magic, will suddenly be free of all political ads; the newspapers will shift gears and begin to plot the winner's future course for him; and the few bedraggled political placards left on light poles and in vacant lots will slowly disintegrate into dust.

Hopefully, the painful memory of this ugliest of all campaigns will eventually soften in our remembrances and we will be free to resume our so-called "normal" lives.

True evaluation comes only with hindsight, but one thing is eminently clear: the twin villains of this sordid affair agreed upon by both candidate and voter were the bureaucrats and the press. Endless stump speeches and TV ads labeled that amorphous and sinister assemblage called "the bureaucracy" as the true destroyer of the American way. Candidates questioned too severely or criticized in print were quick to point to "the press" as the covert worm eating away the core of the nation.

Both groups, of course, have much within them to criticize. An entrenched bureaucracy tends to become a law unto itself, frequently responsive to no one and using much of its productive hours satisfying its self interest. The press, knowing its readership all too well, will too frequently take the low or trivial path when the high road might serve "the truth" better.

But let it be said here that both are basically honorable and totally indispensable factors in a well functioning free society, and for candidates to hide their shortcomings behind cheap attacks on either bureaucracy or the press may, like super-patriotism, be the final refuge of scoundrels.

We are prone to give the word "bureaucracy" a dirty meaning, visualizing a bunch of lazy, high-living civil servants, feeding at the government trough and bungling simple directives aimed at making our lives easier. In reality, they are, to an overwhelming degree, overworked, underpaid staff members who make governmental departments run despite poorly-written and underfunded legislation. Without the glorified spotlight of the politician, they actually make government work; and too many newly-formed third world countries have foundered into anarchy because their revolution, purposely or not, destroyed the bureaucracy of the previous government. True, this "monster" bureaucracy may have in its top echelons a few of those venal, manipulative individuals pointed to by failing candidates, but its large body is made up of the clerks and managers whose unsung job it is to keep your government running no matter who is elected.

The press, in recent years, has come under increasing criticism, some deserved, for, on the one hand, dogging candidates incessantly with embarrassing questions, and on the other, dealing in sensational trivia while real issues are left unwritten. Well, the press is hardly perfect, but without the stream of faceless journalists and editors who seek out the facts and then dare to print them in the face of political disapproval, we would be little better than the slaves of a dictatorship. The press has been accused of being partisan and to some extent it is true. There are newspapers where hard news and editorializing are hopelessly mixed on page one and when this happens, we have propaganda not news. But most seek out the facts, verify and then print them, regardless of the particular political bent of its editors and reporters.

When the true facts bite a candidate too hard he will all too often try to pin the blame on the press, thus, in a way, "killing the messenger" for bringing the bad news. Unfortunately, as the public grows more emotionally partisan in the heat of the campaign, it becomes all too easy to blame the reporter or TV newsman who cites facts at odds with one beliefs and preferences. Thus, it is the reporter, not the candidate who becomes guilty.

Human emotions being what they are, it is not hard to understand the ease with which the anxious candidate, at the height of his campaign, will turn his "mob" against the bureaucrat or the reporter. It's been done for more than a few years. "But lets keep those among us who know better, from joining into the chorus of condemnation. A capable bureaucracy and a free press are exactly as good as we want and allow them to be; lets continue to disbelieve the candidate's cheap shots at them.

As Pogo used to say in the old comic strip "We has met the enemy and he is us!"

Grossmont High School District report

by June M. Mott, Board Member

At its relatively short meeting on Oct. 22, only 33 items were dealt with - most of them under the consolidated motion which expedites Board action on those agenda items which are not held by the Board, administration, or members of the audience. If the members of the Board have done their homework (studying agenda items, asking pertinent questions of the proper authorities, discussing items with people in the community, or answering phone calls from parents and taxpayers), this consolidated motion allows the Board to concentrate on those items which have been held.

One such item held by Tom Davies, board member, involved the first reading of policy revisions of Board Policy Articles O and 1 prepared by CSBA (Calif. School Boards Assoc.). On July 18, 1991 the Governing Board approved a contract with CSBA to review district board policy manuals and prepare them for CSBA's manual maintenance service which includes putting the manual on computer through a software program called GAMUT (Governance and Management Using Technology).

From July, 1991 to August, 1992, a local committee met regularly with Nancy Vandebur, CSBA consultant and Dr. Michael Eddy, Director of Administrative Services to thoroughly review district policies and regulations and make changes. Dr. Davies attended a few of those meetings as a board member; June M. Mott, board member, attended all of them to make sure that the Board's point of view and intent were clearly stated in clear, basic English. His purpose in holding this item encompassed several concerns: some of the language which is understood by educators, but may not be understood by the public; the lack of what he believes are some measurable objectives; and policies which are, in a sense, the Board's contract with the public and the Board's expectations of the administration and, as such, should be clearly stated.

Article O, therefore, was held until the Nov. 5 meeting; Article 1 was approved by the remainder of the Board. Because there are nine articles to be approved in all, it is important to deal with them expeditiously in view of the fact that the GAMUT system is due to be in operation within the next six to nine months.

As I pointed out, these policies are living documents which can be continually updated by CSBA so that the GUHSD can stay in compliance with the latest Education Code and legislative changes.

Approval of the proposed collective bargaining agreement with the GEA (Grossmont Education Association) was requested. A new technique, known as collaborative bargaining, was used in the negotiations which began in May; both teams feel that this process is a great improvement over "adversarial" bargaining and it led to a three-year agreement with the teachers.

The agreement includes a .0075 percent salary increase retroactive to July 1, 1992; an additional anniversary increment of $1,075 to begin with a teacher's 35th year of service; a minimum salary of $25,326 for all new teachers employed in the district; all extended extra-curricular assignments will be based on a percent of step 1, Class 3 of the '92-'93 salary schedules. Depending upon the assignment, the range of stipends would be three percent ($796) to 10 percent ($2,653).

Additional stipends of $1,000 were added for site technology coordinators and library department chairpersons; $800 for AVID coordinators and bilingual department chairpersons.

The district will increase its contributions to the employee benefits plan in order to pay for any increases in the cost of these plans for the '92-'93 school year. An additional dental plan will be added and those teachers with dependent coverage can use the savings to reduce out-of-pocket costs for dependent medical coverage. If members can verify medical coverage through a spouse or the military, they can opt out of medical coverage and receive $869 to be paid in 10 equal payments.

Committees from both GEA and the District will study alternative evaluation programs, salary schedule restructuring and early retirement programs.

The GEA president will get an additional period of time to conduct business.

Reopeners for '93-'94 will include salary and fringe benefits, evaluation, retirement incentives and one item of choice by each bargaining team. For '94-'95 reopeners will be salary and fringe benefits and two items of choice by each team.

Changes in the policy/regulations of IHA/IHA-R, Grading systems was requested. Twenty-six staff members have met for the past year to review the current grading system as revised by four subcommittees.

Subcommittee A reviewed abilities grouping, tracking, grading criteria, and student assessment; Subcommittee B reviewed the valedictorian designation, honors, AP and electives; Subcommittee C met and developed recommendations on the effort and conduct mark formulation, the implications for extra-curricular eligibility; and Subcommittee D worked on absences/attendance and their relationship to grades, makeup work, credit by exam and alternative paths.

Adoption of these policies will be requested at the Nov. 5 Governing Board meeting and they will become effective at the beginning of spring semester Feb. 1, 1993.

Having served on this committee for the entire year as the Governing Board's representative, I can truthfully say, these changes are long overdue. Members of the public can study these new policies at the district offices of Carl Wong, assistant superintendent of education.

Approval was given to the employment of five consultants: Mike Agundes to provide CODE Parent Education at El Cajon Valley High School Oct. 9, '92-June 17, '93; Frank Malm to provide support services to district schools participating in the Academic League and Decathlon Sept. 1, '92 - June 30, '93; Tom Steiner as keynote speaker at West Hills' "At Risk" luncheon Nov. 4, '92, for 40 or more identified "at risk" students. Topics will include school attendance, alcohol, drug and tobacco use, and self-esteem; Robert King, former assistant superintendent in the district, to conduct a workshop and in-service activities for recently assigned principals Oct. 26, '92 - Feb. 22, '93; and Katherine Easter to choreograph Grossmont High School's Ensemble Oct. 13, '92-June 17, '93.

The Board adapted a resolution to observe Oct. 24 - Nov. 1, 1992 as Red Ribbon Week to support and participate in drug prevention activities as evidence of its strong stand against the dangers of drug abuse in our society.

A classified employee was suspended (by the Board) without pay for two days for violating Policy GCN, 29 (absence from duty without leave).

The State Department of Education has notified the district that two grants funded last year under the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Technology Act are eligible for refunding upon submitting another application. Total funding for both was $16,000 and would allow continued services and programs for single parents, displaced homemakers, single pregnant women, and for exploration of non-traditional career opportunities for women. These proposals demonstrate the links between the school district and the community.

A program located at Mt. Miguel High School, with support services provided through the Career Development Center, was amended to extend through July 31, 1993. This program encourages economically disadvantaged youths to stay in schools and get assistance in meaningful employment and careers.

Occupational Training Services, Inc., asked for permission to subcontract with the district for specific services available through the Career Development Center under the JTPA Workforce 55+ Project - and was approved.

The last item I want to highlight is the approval granted to the Student Nutrition Department to join a School Food Service Purchasing Consortium with the S. D. Unified School District for assignment of USDA-donated commodity foods for '93-'94. Currently, the Student Nutrition Department receives donated food at $2.70/case (cost of shipping and handling). The consortium will charge 25 cents per case. This would allow for increased purchasing ability as far as increased varieties of USDA-donated commodity foods.

Date of the next Board meeting is Nov. 5, 1992, in the Grossmont High cafeteria, 7 p.m.

Don't forget to vote on Nov. 3. We need board members who have broad interests in public education, who are informed, and willing to give their best efforts to support public education! Vote wisely!

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF MARY BLAIR HASS, aka MARRY B. HASS Case Number: 158288

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may be otherwise interested in the will or estate, or both, of: MARY BLAIR HASS, aka MARY B. HASS
A PETITION has been filed by ELIZA-BETH BAILEY in the Superior Court of California, County of SAN DIEGO. THE PETITION requests that ELIZA-BETH BAILEY be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.
THE PETITION requests the decedent's WILL and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.
THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.
A HEARING on the petition will be held on NOV 16, 1992 at 1:45 p.m. in Dept. F-5, located at 1501-55 Sixth Avenue, San Diego, CA 92101.
IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.
IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 9100 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in section 1250 of the California Probate Code. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.
Attorney for petitioner:
